PERSONAS

Amara Petrova

"Archetype"

- Age: 21
- Occupation: Master's student in Environmental Sciences
- Origin: Bulgaria
- Current Location: Amsterdam, Netherlands
- Languages: Bulgarian, English, learning Dutch
- Favorite Apps: Duolingo, WhatsApp, Instagram, Pinterest, Google Maps

"Moving abroad is exciting, but it's also overwhelming. I wish making new friends was as easy as it was back home."

Bio

Amara moved from Bulgaria to Amsterdam for her master's, excited by the adventure. But building friendships hasn't been easy. She spends time studying in cafés and visiting museums alone, wishing for people to share it with. Most student events focus on partying, which isn't her vibe, and online groups feel hard to turn into real connections. She hopes to meet other international students who also want to explore the city through shared interests, not just nightlife.

Challenges

- Most social events are party-focused, making it hard to find casual, interest-based meetups
- Traditional language classes feel too formal and intimidating for real conversation practice
- Feels isolated exploring the city alone and unsure how to find others with similar interests

Goals

- Find people to explore the city with, visit museums, or study together
- Join interest-based activities like photography walks or language exchanges
- Improve Dutch through informal conversations, not just classroom lessons
- Discover social events without relying on scattered student forums or party groups

PERSONAS

Wandering Thiago

"Archetype"

- Age: 23
- Occupation: Freelance Videomaker & Content Creator
- Origin: Brazil
- Current Location: Prague, Czech Republic (passing through)
- Languages: Portuguese, English, basic Spanish
- Preferred Apps: Couchsurfing, Google Translate, Instagram, WhatsApp, YouTube

"I meet people for a day or two, then we all move on. It's exciting—but it gets lonely without a deeper connection."

Bio

Thiago left Rio to backpack across Europe, documenting his journey as a freelance videomaker. He funds his travels with small gigs and uploads content to his growing YouTube channel. In some cities, he visits distant relatives, but most of the time, he's solo. Hostel chats come and go, but meaningful connections are rare. He craves spontaneous meetups with people who share his creative spirit. The hardest part isn't the travel—it's the feeling of always being in-between.

Challenges

- Feels disconnected and anonymous in new cities
- Finds it hard to meet people without a shared language or activity
- Social apps feel superficial or geared toward dating
- Sometimes relies on extended family in certain cities, but often travels solo

Goals

- Connect with fellow travelers or creatives for deeper conversations
- Find spontaneous, low-pressure meetups —like a music jam or walking tour
- Share cultural experiences and stories over food or art
- Discover people to collaborate with or learn from along the way

PERSONAS

Nomadic Luca

"Archetype"

- Age: 34
- Occupation: UX/UI Designer & Freelance Consultant
- Origin: Italy
- Current Location: Lisbon, Portugal
- Languages: Italian, English, basic Portuguese
- Preferred Apps: Notion, Slack, Airbnb, Strava, Spotify, Instagram

Challenges

- Feels isolated at times, despite being in vibrant cities
- Has no time to scroll through random expat forums
- Wants to avoid dating apps when just seeking genuine community

"I love the freedom of working anywhere—but it can feel like I'm starting from scratch every time I land somewhere new."

Bio

Luca left his Milan apartment three years ago to explore the world while working remotely. He's lived in Bali, Berlin, and Mexico City before settling for a few months in Lisbon. He thrives in co-working spaces, appreciates good coffee, and likes connecting with other creatives and techies. But starting over in a new place every few months can be emotionally draining. The hardest part is that every city feels like a reset button — socially, emotionally, and culturally.

Goals

- Build genuine friendships with people in similar situations
- Find buddies for workouts, hikes, or surf sessions
- Discover interest-based meetups without relying on scattered platforms like Facebook or Reddit

PERSONAS

Wired Isabela

"Archetype"

- Age: 39
- Occupation: Full Stack Developer (Remote, Fintech)
- Origin: Brazil
- Current Location: Medellín, Colombia
- Languages: Portuguese, English, intermediate Spanish
- Preferred Apps: Slack, VSCode, GitHub, Telegram, Meetup, Spotify

"I love Medellín's energy—but between work calls and solo meals, it's easy to feel like I'm just passing through, even after a year."

Bio

Isabela moved from São Paulo to Medellín for her remote developer job, drawn by the lifestyle and tech scene. She works from cafés and co-working spaces, but often feels disconnected outside work hours. Most of her social life happens online or in passing at tech events. She misses speaking Portuguese and lights up when she meets other Brazilians or Mexicans. After a year, Medellín still feels temporary. She's not looking for parties—just meaningful connections with people who share her rhythm and interests.

Challenges

- Feels socially in-between—too foreign for locals, too different from short-term expats
- Works remotely, which limits her chances to meet new people organically
- Misses speaking Portuguese and connecting with people who get her cultural background

Goals

- Build friendships with other long-term expats and remote workers
- Find spaces where she can speak Portuguese or connect with other Brazilians or Mexicans
- Discover laid-back meetups around music, coding, or food
- Create a sense of home in a city she chose for its culture and cost of living

CS HANGOUTS

Hangouts is the most unsafe function of Couchsurfing because it's so easy to avoid being reported. Unless you bookmark a user's profile page or remember their name perfectly, the moment the person leaves the hangout you're unable to find them again. This is double true when you are already hanging out, or the next day, because once the chat expires there's no way to find the user again unless you've bookmarked or written down their full name. So if something does happen, most users are unable to report or leave negative references.

Hangouts allows you to find and make plans with other members that are nearby. Members can join existing hangouts, or create one of their own. Use Hangouts to find travelers in town to grab a beer with, locals who might be down for a pick-up basketball game, and more.
